

2009 Transportation Research Forum's Graduate Student Paper Contest For Transportation and Related Topics

Have you written, or are in the process of writing, a transportation-related research paper? Consider submitting it to the Transportation Research Forum (TRF) annual student paper contest.

What Could You Win?

The award shall consist of a trip to the TRF 50th Annual Forum (March 16-18, 2009) including waived registration fee, hotel room, round-trip airfare, and a commemorative plaque. The winner is expected to attend the entire conference.

What Are the Rules?

- The paper must be written by a student or students enrolled in an academic institution during the Spring and/or Fall 2008 term.
- The paper must concern some aspect of transportation management, planning, economics, or public policy.
- The paper must be no more than 25 double-spaced type-written pages.
- The paper must represent original research (not literature reviews) and not have been published elsewhere.
- Use any approved reference style.
- Cover page must include the paper title, a single spaced 75 word summary/abstract, student's name, phone and e-mail address, and the name of the institution where the student is enrolled.
- Second page should repeat title and abstract but contain no identifying names.

What Is the Chance of Winning?

- TRF is a modest-sized organization; you are probably one of a relatively small number of students who will know about this contest.
- ZERO if you don't submit (much better if you submit an entry).

How Do I Enter My Paper?

By Jan. 1, 2009, submit four copies (which will not be returned) to:

Eric Jessup
Assistant Professor
Washington State University
Pullman, WA 99164
Phone: (509)335-5558
Fax: (509)335-1173
E-mail: eric_jessup@wsu.edu