

The Department of Economics invites applications for a tenure-track position at either the Assistant or Associate Professor level, subject to budgetary approval, to begin August 2009. We are looking for someone with the desire and ability to teach a doctoral-level course in Applied Time Series Econometrics, to teach one or more courses in Financial Economics in our economics doctoral program, to participate actively on doctoral dissertation committees, and to perform other duties typical for tenure-track faculty in a research oriented department.

The successful candidate will demonstrate promise of publishing in high quality scholarly journals and of being an effective teacher. Applicants should have the Ph.D. or be able to give strong assurance of completion prior to August 2009. Send a letter of application, vita, representative research papers, and evidence of teaching effectiveness. Please have three letters of recommendation forwarded to the contact below. Complete applications should be received by December 1. Applications received later will only considered to the extent possible. Candidates will be interviewed at the ASSA meetings. West Virginia University is an equal opportunity-affirmative action employer. CONTACT: Ms. Nicki Metts, Department of Economics, West Virginia University, PO Box 6025, Morgantown WV 26506-6025

The Department of Economics has M.A. and Ph.D. programs in economics and an active research-oriented faculty. The typical teaching load is six credit hours each semester. Faculty receive strong research support from the department, college and the university. At the undergraduate level, the department offers majors in economics both in the College of Business and Economics and also the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences.

West Virginia University is located in Morgantown, WV, a vibrant community which is frequently ranked as one of the best small cities in America. There are wonderful opportunities for outdoor recreation. Visit <http://www.be.wvu.edu/portals/morgantown.htm> for more information about the community.