Author guidelines for Handbooks in Economics series

(1) Electronic manuscript
The authors of a Handbook chapter are asked to deliver the final version of the text of their manuscript in electronic form (i.e. on disk) with an exactly matching printout of the text (+ an additional printout on which index terms are marked) to the Volume Editor. The Volume Editor(s) will send the complete manuscript to the Publishing House Elsevier/North-Holland.

(2) Figures
Figures may be delivered in electronic form (with matching printouts), or as a set of good quality original drawings.

For further details, please see the attached document: Compuscripts: Instructions for Authors

(3) Appendices
An appendix is not numbered as a section within a chapter. It should be headed simply Appendix (if more than one, Appendix A, Appendix B, etc.).

(4) References
For the Handbooks in Economics series, references to the literature should be made according to the name-year system.

Citations in the text should give the surname of the author(s) followed by the year of publication. For example:

Levy (1991) coined the term . . . [one author]
Evans and Lewis (1994) have shown . . . [two authors]
On the other hand, Grant et al. (1995) show . . . [three or more authors]
King (1996a) proposed that . . . / King (1996b) found . . .

At the end of the chapter, a full list of the references cited should be assembled. Entries should be ordered alphabetically (and chronologically within an author group) as illustrated here:

References
Evans, A.B. and L. Thomas (1990), . . .
Evans, A.B., F.B. Davis and P.M. Lewis (1990), . . .
King, R. (1996a), . . .
King, R. (1996b), . . .

Reference list style. Journal titles should not be abbreviated in the reference list and where possible article titles should be quoted. Examples of reference list styles:

(5) Index terms
To assist with the preparation of the Subject Index, Handbook authors are asked to provide an additional printout of their manuscript with index terms highlighted (usually two terms per page, on average, is adequate).
(6) Abstract/JEL classification codes/keywords
As input for reader alerting services, authors are asked to write a 300 word abstract or summary of the chapter. This should be clearly identified as the Chapter Abstract and stored in a separate file from the main body of text. Please add the appropriate JEL classification(s) for your chapter as well and provide ± 5 keywords.

(7) Handbooks in Economics Website
For promotion purposes, we would like to include on our Handbooks in Economics website a recent photograph of yourself together with your name/address/email address and a link to your home page. Please provide this information when returning the signed agreement. For further information, please visit our website, details below:
